Bouncing netbooks and the Santa clause.

Plummeting prices and fixed price mobile broadband deals are putting more and more netbooks into the hands of teenagers.

But gadget insurer Supercover says less than half of those being bought for young adults are insured in any way, and with retail and mobile provider sales likely to go vertical on the run-up to Christmas it means even more will be unprotected.

“Not all home contents insurance policies cover gadgets or netbooks – quite often they have to be the subject of a separate policy. Right now, 60% of netbooks are not covered, and this will increase as sales escalate towards Christmas,” said Carmi Korine of Supercover Insurance.

“It’s an easy and exciting gift for a teenager to be given – but we all know that teenagers lose and break things, and the industry expects netbooks to become the next big steal-able item.

“They are small and easily snatched from bags and then hidden, and they don’t have the built-in disablement feature that kicks in when a mobile phone, for instance, is stolen.”

Supercover’s gadget policy is available through a number of electrical, mobile phone and computer retailers. Premiums start at £2.49 a month.

The policy includes gadget insurance cover for mobile phones, satnav, netbooks, MP3 and MP4 players and other consumer-portable high-intrinsic-value items – including power tools – and includes 3GB of back-up and storage for relevant items at no extra cost.

Notes:

Supercover Insurance began life as Mobile Phone Supercover Ltd in 1995 to provide extended warranty for mobile phones only. In 2005 the business expanded to include cover on mobile phones and other essential everyday electronic items to include laptops, PCs, satellite navigation systems, iPods, MP3 players, TVs and more. In order to reflect the diverse product range being offered, the company's name was changed to Supercover Insurance Plc. Supercover now has a strong, ever-increasing base of around 1,000 channel partners across the UK and the Republic of Ireland, with a customer base exceeding 100,000 consumers.
